

ABSTRACT

An apparatus and method of reminding a person that routine pet care has been completed or need needs to be completed. More particularly the invention relates to a manner in 5 which to provide a reminder to someone that pet care has been accomplished or needs to be accomplished more effectively and efficiently than in the past. The apparatus includes among its essential elements a slender display board having a front face and a rear face; a display graphic being permanently affixed to at least the front face of the display board; a hanger being at least attached to the rear face of the display board wherein the hanger can
10 be used to attach the display board to a substantially vertical surface; a graphic instrument used to deposit erasable marks to at least the front face of the display board; a graphic instrument receptacle attached to the display board wherein the graphic instrument can be removably attached; an eraser element wherein the eraser eradicates the erasable marks deposited by the graphic instrument; and, a plurality of shaped display members having 15 at least a first side and a second side wherein the second side is adapted to be removably affixed to the display board's front face, wherein the shaped members are removably affixed in a position on the display board, each shaped display member able to be removably affixed in any position on the board a plurality of times.